TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

It took several months for our church to find a good contractor. The contractor had to be competent. The contractor also had to be able to work hand in hand with our church's building committee which was comprised of fifteen different men. This in itself is not an easy feat. After much consideration and prayer, we chose the Hermes Construction Company. Now, three months after the completion of the new sanctuary (August 14, 2005), we don't feel like we had a good contractor, but a great contractor.

Hermes Construction handled themselves in a professional and delicate manner which is sometimes necessary when dealing with church concerns. Our new building is well constructed, solid, efficient and economical. When we have had problems during or even after construction, Hermes took care of us in a timely way. As a church, we chose to build under the process called "Cost Plus with a Maximum Price", which certainly released all tension between contractor and client. Hermes said that once the process was underway it would take around eight months to complete and, true to their word, that is just about how long it took.

In closing, I highly recommend the Hermes Construction Company.

Sincerely,

Pastor Scott Miller
